A, B, C's of Hibiscus

DRIVING AROUND PALM BEACH in winter or summer, the eye is arrested by islands of brilliant color in the green, blue and white symphony of lawns and trees, ocean and sand. While variegated crotons, snow-bush and annuals provide their share, the most popular as well as the most dependable beauty spots will be hibiscus blooms.

In the natural setting of their glossy foliage, the myriad colors of hibiscus flowers can be depended on for heart-warming color all around the year. From the brilliant single red that is practically a trade-mark of Hawaii to the multi-shaded hybrids having reached probably their highest development in Florida, the hibiscus (rose of China) is a beautiful addition to the scenery of Palm Beach.

Hibiscus fanciers range from the nursemaid who plucks a bloom to hold and admire while she walks along the street with her little charges to the mistress of an ocean front estate who has a standing order with her favorite nursery for every new variety cultivated by grafting and experimenting. Men are not immune to the beauty of hibiscus, as witness the displays in every flower show of blooms grown and exhibited by the stronger sex.

Opinion varies as widely as the number of distinct varieties (currently around 600) as to the most beautiful. Hobbyists who will have nothing to do with ruffled, double or triple blooms, preferring the single, or slightly overlapped petal flowers, disagree with the choices of gardeners who like multi-zoned flowers. Lovers of delicate veining, shading and pure pastel shades frown sometimes on the choices showing heady hues and strong variety within one bloom. Colonists and visitors who merely enjoy beauty in any form, and a lacing of brilliance among the greenery, like all hibiscus blooms.

From Agnes Gault, a very large satiny pink to Yellow Variegated, origin unknown, with leaves variegated with yellow and double yellow flowers, all hibiscus have individuality. The Florida Hibiscus Bulletin, attempting to list all varieties as fast as they are developed, carries an impressive list of names. Many are descriptive of the Alba (from Bradshaw, Texas) is a strong growing pure white with definite pink eye, unshaded. Albo-Lacinatus is a large flesh-white, scalloped petals, a schizopetalus hybrid. Aldabaran has a flat flower of spectrum red with pinkish sheen. Alline Thompson, with orange red shading to pink center, has large perfect crest on style.

Aloha Land, Hawaiian, is a single lemon-yellow with pink center, reflexed. Amarillo is a large, reflexed pure lemon yellow. American Beauty, Hawaiian, has white edges on a very large, single bright pink bloom. The Ann Baldwin is a light claret with gold edges and tips. Apex is the name of a flat, orange-yellow with slightly darker center.

Named for its color is the delicate Apple Blossom, pale flesh pink with deeper veining, rather small. Apricota is, as the name suggests, a large ruffled apricot with pink center. Another similarly named variety is the single Apricot Glow, a bright apricot in color showing a peculiar heavy style.

ing an otherwise monotone spot. More practically named Best Single White, of unknown origin, has a medium sized cream-white flower. It is a sturdy bush with good foliage.

Betty Chalk, Betty Kersey and Betty James are a study in contrasts. Betty Chalk, self-colored violet-pink; Betty Kersey, a golden salmon pink and Betty James large, ruffled overlapping petals of flame-red. Bride is, as the name implies, white; but strangely constructed with large, flat, crepey petals, overlapping. It varies from white to apple-blossom pink fading to white.

Bridesmaid, in a color often chosen by bridesmaids, is a brilliant light rose with large, flat and faintly crepey petals resembling those of Bride. Buttercup is a sprightly clear yellow; one Butterfly sports large reflexed dark yellow petals with white and pink center. Another Butterfly is brown with a red eye.

A Hawaiian-Johnson hybrid named Cadmium is glowing cadmium yellow touched with gold. Another in the same color range is California Gold, which is large and flat with a pink eye. Calliope, now unobtainable, is buff with crimson eye and red veins, pink and yellow on reverse side.

Art League Members' Exhibit

THE 36TH ANNUAL MEMBERS' EXHIBITION of the Palm Beach Art League opened in March at the Norton Gallery of Art and proved one of the most comprehensive of the season. Selected from more than three hundred works, the 36th annual, in its one hundred and twenty-three pieces, gave a cross-section of the many and diverse talents being expressed within the Palm Beach Art League.

From oils to the most mixed media, every variety of technique was included in the showing. From the point of view of the approach to artistic statement, graphic or plastic, the range was also of the broadest.

Faced with the task of making a harmonious unit from such divergent works assembled within one sweep of the public's eye, Willis F. Woods, director of the Norton Gallery, did a superlative job of the display which he was called upon to organize and hang. The result held interest and the contrasts, inevitable as they were, gave no idea of the dissonant effect that a less ably arranged display might have produced.

Among the diversities of theme and treatment, the jury of the Annual accomplished a most competent job of selection. Hilton Leech, director of the Amagansett School, in Sarasota, joined Henry Strater, trustee of the Museum of Art of Ogunquit, Me., in choosing those works which were to be honored by special awards, nine in number, and three honorable mentions in various media.

The first prize for oils was the Goldie Paley award, which was bestowed upon "Seascape" by Eleanor Dix, depicting a powerful structure of seashells beneath a romantic moon, a riddle of forms derived from the sea. Richard Banks, who recently designed the costumes and a decorative curtain for the Norton Players' production of "Gigi," received the second prize for oils for his painting "Some More Daisies," symmetrically patterned.

Sylvia Chilton, who earlier in the season had held a Palm Beach one-man show of many diversities, was awarded the first watercolor prize of the Annual. Her entry: "Dune Drama," one of those delicate and surprising pieces of deft evocation at which she excels, technically accomplished and poetically satisfying.

The second water-color prize went to Gertrude Schweitzer for "Morning," another of those increasingly abandoned and reticent pieces which she has been showing recently.

The first award for sculpture went to a piece of small dimensions by Hazel Ewell, "Young Deer," seemingly a fragment with all the appearances of weather-beaten antiquity, remotely Egyptian, expressively hieratic.

"Success," by Joseph B. Bishir, a nightmarish comment on conquest, aggressively animal, derived in part from the form of the material selected, worm-eaten and tortured, received the second sculpture award.

Hartwell Wyse Priest is the recipient of the graphic arts award. His prize-winning entry is a finely balanced lithograph, "Woods": in the density of growth and decay, transfiguring competitive rhythms of structure, in the organized maze of the jungle, the effulgent promise of light beyond.

For a representational example, the Thomas Shields Clarke memorial prize was awarded to Julia Kniseley for a portrait of unusual pathos and silent anguish: "My Son, Dunkie," a small full-length portrait with a plunging perspective, as from an adult viewpoint. This little oil draws particular response from the onlooker because of its portrayal of the tragedy of being little in an uncomprehending world of grown-ups, the sorrow and burden of misunderstood appeal in a pattern of rejection.

For a non-representational of example, the Mrs. Beatrice Norton Richards prize was awarded to "Clown," a stylized representation with arbitrary geometrical patterns by Albert Goldman, notable for its organization of cool tones.

To Richard L. Merrick went an honorable mention for his canvas "Still Life with Squash," painted with considerable sharpness in a composition which seems less casual and more studied than the artist may have wished. His inclination to hardness seems to hold the greatest promise.

"Arrangement No. 15" received an honorable mention in oils. This composition by Prudence Vaughn does not leave the spectator indifferent by virtue of the contrivance of breaking every suggestion of responsive rhythm by the device of breaking it off before a resolution is achieved.

Minerva Walker Goldsmith received a watercolor honorable mention for "Brahmas," a monochrome variation on her "Herd at Night" that received a prize at the Society of the Four Arts Annual.

Hilton Leech, one of the jury, is showing a mixed media "By the Sea" which he withdrew from competition. This composition of dominant horizontals enlivened with the pizzicato notations of hopping sandpipers has been selected by the other juror, Henry Strater, for exhibit at the Ogunquit Museum of Art this coming summer.

At random one would like to note a few of the excellent pieces on display. Among these:

Jean Wagner Willhite's "Dry Dock" is dramatic, brilliant, a response to atmosphere compellingly composed and forceful.

Dorothy Sherman Leech withheld her "Horse Creek" from competition. It is an atmospheric piece also, oppressive and tense, with sensuous overtones, coloring and composition, a parable of stresses lived in a world of decay.

"Ocean Lure" by Selma Shelander is a very handsome medium-sized canvas having many virtues, merits and excellencies of texture, color and balance.

William M. Kitchell shows a "Landscape," buildings within the trees, a stage setting for an anecdote by Dostoevsky, drama and expectancy in every line of a warm and provocative composition.

"Seascape," by Eleanor Dix, Goldie Paley award-winner.

"Autumn" by Rose Krauss, leaves an impression of sweeping slanting sunlight, departing, an inspired little canvas of enduring charm.

Among notable pieces in the water media, Margaret O. Earwood's "Sponge Boats at Tarpon" stands out, a vigorous monochrome strongly composed, dynamically balanced.

"Kearny Skyline" by Henry Gasser, under that peculiar cold light that contemporary realists affect in American watercolor—something quite unique, if just suggesting the sordid—is a fine evocation of the hopeless backwash of the city, in a manner that brings brilliance to the dreary.

Frank W. Baluffi's "One Facing North" is not without influences, however in his earth bound birds, obscure suns and muted campanili lie an idiom to watch.

"Dune Drama," by Sylvia Chilton, first watercolor prize.

In the graphics section many interesting works were selected for exhibit, including Theda Tilton's "Fisherman," with its use of the woodblock grain, and Richard L. Merrick's "Sacred and Profane Love."

All in all this thirty-sixth Annual of the Palm Beach Art League represented a stimulating cross section of many rewarding talents.

Reviewing the 1953-54 season at the Norton Gallery one looks back at many rewarding experiences from the ceramics show to the Marsden Hartley retrospective.

A selection of Winslow Homer watercolors will be remembered.

The Hallmark International Award showing had many sidelights bearing on the eventual emergence of a religious consciousness in contemporary art idioms. From the poll made among visitors the discouraging conclusion must be reached that there is no urgent desire for religion in art at present: The work that received the largest number of ballots was solid workmanship but as a piece of religious art it would have been a fine illustration for an advertisement of a banking institution, a telephone company or a tire manufacturer . . .

A number of the other exhibits of the season will remain in our memory, thanks to the initiative of Willis F. Woods, a gallery director with vision.

"Young Deer," by Hazel Ewell, first sculpture prize.

Amigos in Spain

SPRING HAS COME TO SPAIN, in the wake of icy blasts that had congealed most of Europe. Palm trees that shivered under a blanket of unaccustomed snow in southern Malaga are basking in a warm sun . . . Madrid's huge fountains that glistened with glacial hangings of intricate designs (looking like exquisitely-wrought crystal chandeliers, upside-down!) are again spouting like geysers . . . And flower stalls, vivid with yellow jonquils, purple violets, almond blossoms and pink carnations, have sprouted overnight on the street corners.

Madrid's "hostess with the mostes'," charming Vicki Montiel, more formally known as Mrs. Luis Montiel, wife of the owner and publisher of "Semana" (Spanish equivalent of our LIFE) had a formal luncheon the other day at her home, which tastefully reflects fifteen years spent in the Orient with her late husband, Don Mendez de Vigo, who was Spanish Ambassador to Japan. A fluent linguist, Vicki Montiel's parties are an interesting babel of diverse tongues! Her luncheon included Americans, French visitors to Spain, and members of Spanish aristocracy. And the fascinating Pretender to the Throne of Russia, Grand Duke Vladimir, and his beautiful Grand Duchess Leonida, proud parents of their first child, whose Orthodox christening attended by top-drawer society and dignitaries of officialdom, caused a sensation in Catholic Madrid!

The hand-clapping you hear on the streets everywhere, after 10:30 p.m., summoning the sereno (night watchman) to unlock entrance gates and doors (a centuries-old custom, wherein the sereno answers by banging his heavy stick on the pavement) completely fascinates frequent Palm Beach visitors Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Brooks, who are here for a few weeks, after a month's tour in Italy. Taking in first-of-the-season bullfights, sight-seeing and shopping, they expect to return to "Eventide," their Riddle's Bay home in Bermuda, in time for the blooming Easter lilies.

At the delightful informal luncheon given by Count and Countess de Quintanilla the debut of this country's first English-language newspaper, "Spanish American Courier" was enthusiastically discussed. Formerly Aline Griffiths, of New York, good looking, "muy inteligente" Countess de Calle Serrano, the Fifth Avenue of Madrid, with exclusive shops, apartments and outdoor cafes.

Quintanilla (whose attractive husband, heir to one of Spain's oldest titles, is descended from 15th-century-hero General Perez de Guzman, upon whom Isabella's King Ferdinand conferred the title El Bueno, The Good, for his refusal to surrender Tarifa to save the life of his son, held as hostage by the Arabs) is predicted to become one of the most important women in Spain!

A young woman of variegated interests, Countess de Quintanilla's hobbies, apart from being with her three lovely children, are: politics, flamenco dancing, which she is learning from 70-year-old Gypsy Queen Pastora Imperio; their 13th century finca (country home) at Estremadura, now being converted into a shooting box; and giving benefits to raise money for medicines and clothing for the children of the poor in Spain.

Recently returned from Spanish Morocco, former U.S. Ambassador to San Salvador (and youngest Ambassador in the history of the U. S.) Angier Biddle Duke, and his charming wife (Maria Luisa de Arana, granddaughter of the late tenth Marques Campo Real) are in Madrid visiting with Mrs. Duke's family and their many friends here. Angier Duke's energy and enthusiasm are presently concentrated on the newly-organized "American Friends Of Spain Foundation, Inc.," which has as its objectives the strengthening of the bonds of friendship between the two countries, and giving unofficial help to Spanish charities. The Red Cross of Spain, under its president, the Duchess of Victoria, is the agency through which this assistance will be administered.

President of the "American Friends Of Spain Foundation, Inc." is Mrs. William C. T. Gaynor (daughter of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, and granddaughter of Mrs. John Warburton); vice president and representative in Madrid, Mr. Angier Biddle Duke; and chairman of the board, former U. S. Ambassador to Spain, Stanton Griffis. Members of the board of interest to Palm Beach are Mr. Winston Guest, president of Aerovias Guest, Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Mrs. Julius Noyes and Mrs. Harold E. Talbott, wife of the Secretary of the Air Force.

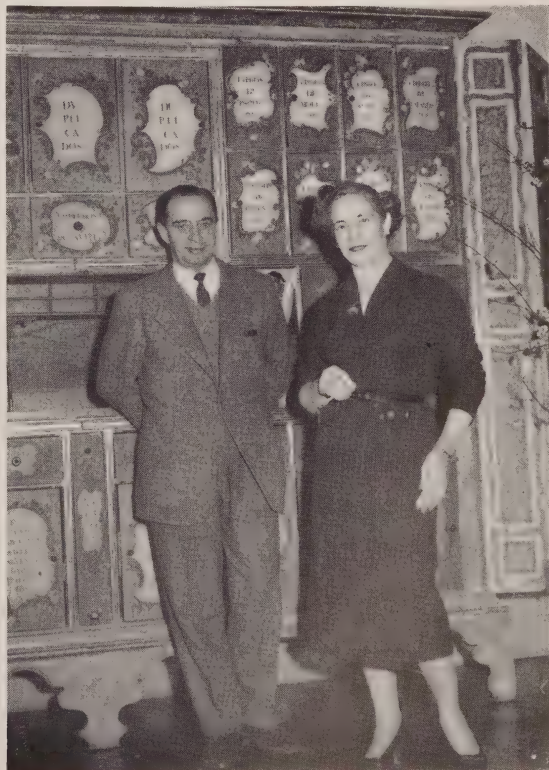

Honorary chairmen are U. S. Ambassador to Spain, James C. Dunn, and Spanish Ambassador to Washington, Don Jose Felix de Lequerica.

The party of the season, with its distinguished array of guests, was the farewell cocktail party given at their home by Senor and Senora de Arana for their son-in-law and daughter, the Angier Biddle Dukes, who will soon take off for their home in New York. Among the guests were: Minister of Foreign Affairs and Mrs. Martin de Artajo (who "never go to cocktail parties unless it's an official affair," so the party revolved around the American Friends Of Spain and the Spanish Friends Of America!); Miguel, Duke of Primo de Rivera, Ambassador to London; Mr. Bedford Davie, press of Mrs. Paulding Fosdick; Mr. Charles Luckman; Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Brooks; General August Kissner, Chief of U. S. Military Mission; Colonel and Mrs. Earl Wilberforce Jones; Ambassador and Mrs. Juan Cardenas; Conde and Condesa de las Mirandas (the Condesa, Maria Luisa Duke's aunt, is the last direct descendant of a prominent former resident of Florida, Ponce de Leon); Ambassador and Mrs. James C. Dunn; press attache of the U. S. Embassy and Mrs. Hoyt Ware; the Duke and Duchess of Lerma, chosen to fly to the U. S. for Mrs. Lytle Hull's ball at the Waldorf on Nov. 2; the Duke of Bailen, former Ambassador to San Salvador, and many other prominent members of capital society.

Adios, hasta el proximo invierno!

THE Colony HOTEL

FOR DISCRIMINATING PERSONS who appreciate the luxury, cuisine and the inimitable club environment of a distinctive hotel, The Colony, one of Palm Beach's newest hosteleries, is the smart answer. With gracious service as the "hallmark," it cleverly merges tradition and modernity, in contemporary physical aspects and the essence of true southern hospitality, in the individual and personalized services for guests.

All of the hundred smartly appointed rooms and the three luxurious penthouses atop the hotel, are scientifically air-conditioned; and may be heated when the weather is chilly. Slightly aloof from the main thoroughfare, yet easily accessible to all social and business activities, in a picturesque setting overlooking the famous Everglades Club golf course, The Colony is strategically located.

The Terrace Club, located in the east wing of the hotel, was designed for al fresco lunching and dining. It is enclosed with an awning-type twindo glass, which makes the smart room "weather-proof" for any weather vagaries . . . cozy and comfortable when a bit chilly and may be opened to the ocean breezes, when the weather is "typically resort style." Overlooking the tropical patio, it has an interesting vista; highlighted by the famous colorful murals of old "Floridays." The "contour bamboo bar," which is built around one corner of the terrace room, is a conversation piece architecturally, in Palm Beach.

The intimate little cocktail lounge of The Colony is a popular rendezvous at the cocktail hour and on. Adjacent to the dining room, it is tropical in theme, dramatized by exotic Florida flower murals. The beverages here reflect the high quality of the cuisine and by the way, have you tried the "vodkatini," which is the smart drink now in Palm Beach?

Appearing here nightly from nine until two a. m. Elou Williams, sophisticated song stylist, who returned to The Colony this season by popular request. Her inimitable song interpretations are definitely individual and this season she introduced "special tricks" to the singing of current Broadway musicals in her repertoire. French songs she made popular during her several engagements at the Chez Paree in Montreal, are favorites of the Colony patrons. Also, the lilting songs written especially for her by topflight New York songwriters. When guests who can sing, want to try their talents, Miss Williams encourages them and the audience participation provides an interesting time and good fun for everyone.

Mr. Bernard Cooley, president and general manager of The Colony, reports a successful year at the hotel and says there are numerous reservations for the "little season" and on into the summer. As a matter of fact, the summers here are rapidly becoming as popular as winter vacations. Being air-conditioned, the hotel which is located in the ocean block, has proven far more comfortable than many of the northern summer resorts. Numerous Palm Beach residents also prefer the hotel to their homes, when they come down for the summer, because of the air-cooled comfort and convenience.

Among persons arriving at the Colony for the spring season: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hale and children of New York City, who have taken a penthouse. Mr. Hale is president of the National Yeast Corporation and one of the sponsors of the Palm Beach Playhouse. He is now engaged in a plan for producing motion pictures in Spain, in co-operation with George England.

NASSAU

APRIL BRINGS TO A CLOSE the gayest winter season and ushers in the brightest prospective summer season in the history of this old resort.

Homes opened earlier than ever before, with most winter colonists in residence by the Christmas holidays. By January the tempo had been set for a lively round of social activities that has continued unabated.

The winter in Nassau would not have been complete without at least one wedding. The March social highlight was the marriage of Miss Jane Henderson, daughter of the Hon. Guy Henderson, Chief Justice of the Bahamas, and Mrs. Henderson, to Mr. Robert Anthony Randall Bell of Yorks, England.

Almost the entire winter colony turned out to witness the wedding, which was performed in Christ Church Cathedral on March 1, by the Rt. Rev. Spence Burton, S.S.J.E., Lord Bishop of Nassau, assisted by his chaplain, the Rev. John Calnan.

The church was crowded to capacity as 450 members of Nassau's winter colony and an untold number of other spectators filled every available pew and overflowed into the streets outside.

The bride looked lovely in a long-sleeve gown of French lace with a three-tiered nylon tulle skirt and white veil. Her three bridesmaids were young Lady Caroline Knox, five-year-old daughter of the Earl and Countess of Ranfurly; Miss Shirley Oakes, youngest daughter of Eunice, Lady Oakes; and Lady Peek, wife of Sir Francis Peek of London and Nassau.

Little Lady Caroline looked charming in a gown of pink nylon tulle and Miss Shirley Oakes and Lady Peek wore matching gowns of blue in the same fabric. All three wore tiaras of delicate rice-shells, gathered in the Bahamas.

Dr. and Mrs. Fred Kennedy of London, Ontario and Nassau opened their winter home "New Moon" for part of the Nassau season.

In Nassau for a late winter vacation recently at the Balmoral Club were Mr. and Mrs. J. Permar Richards, Jr., of Woodley, Villanova, Pa. Here, Mr. Richards, a vice president of the Russell Ogden Co., and his wife relax on the club's beach.

The bridegroom's best man was Mr. Ian Henderson, brother of the bride. Another brother of the bride, Mr. Neil Henderson, acted as page. He was clad in full Highland dress and wearing the plaid and hose of Clan Henderson.

The reception at the Jungle Club which followed the wedding was the largest and most distinguished social gathering of the season, with 450 invited guests representing most of the winter colony. The toast to the happy couple was proposed by His Excellency the Governor, the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Ranfurly, and was responded to in an apt and witty fashion by the bridegroom. Following the reception, the bride and bridegroom enplaned for Paris, where they planned to spend their honeymoon before taking up residence in Yorkshire, England.

Among distinguished winter residents present were Lord and Lady Iliffe, Lady Oakes, Lady Simmonds, Sir Victor Sassoon, Sir Duncan and Lady Cumming, Sir Kenneth and Lady Solomon, the Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Mr. A. G. H. Gardner-Brown; Mrs. Gardner-Brown, Col. and Mrs. F. A. Wanklyn, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Vernay, Mrs. Frank Munson, Lady McAlpine, Mrs. Francis Whitten, Brigadier K. S. Torrance, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Miller, Mrs. E. A. Stone, Lady Garthwaite, Col. and Mrs. Leonard Colman, Mrs. Anne Archbold, and Major and Mrs. Herbert Holt.

The season is extending far beyond its previous bounds each year, and this year, for the first time, the social season embraced some of the other resort islands of the Bahamas.

A social fillip was given the opening of Andros Town, the multi-million dollar island resort newly built on the largest island in the Bahamas by Mr. Aexl Wenner-Gren, well-known Nassau winter resident. The official opening of the new venture and its smart Lighthouse Club was well attended by members of the Nassau colony, including Eunice, Lady Oakes; Mr. Robert Goelet of New York and Nassau; Sir Francis and Lady Peek, Baron and Baroness Constantin Stackelberg of Estonia and Washington, D. C.; the Earl and Countess of Ranfurly, Lord and Lady Bruntisfield, Mrs. Clark Gable, Sir Kenneth and Lady Solomon, M. Henri de Vilmorin of Paris, France; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Webster of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Loy Anderson of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Bernard Gimbel of Philadelphia and Palm Beach; Mr. and Mrs. John C. Clarke of Hialeah, Fla.; Dr. Matthew Mellon of Pittsburgh, Pa., who arrived aboard his yacht, Vagabondia II; Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey E. Waltman and Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Tice of Chicago, who arrived aboard the schooner, Little Whale; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pew of Philadelphia; Mr. Fred Crawford of Cleveland; Dr. and Mrs. Jack Avrack of New York; Mrs. John Drexel of Philadelphia; Col. and Mrs. Anthony Biddle of Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Biddle of Philadelphia; and Mr. Charles Moon of Miami.

In Nassau, playgoers were delighted with the management's decision to extend the season of theater-in-the-round for another week, and the last play, "The Glass Menagerie" was to be staged the week beginning March 29. The nine-week season was scheduled to close on Saturday, April 3.

The twice-weekly race meets will continue through April at Hobby Horse Hall, and are still attracting record crowds. Racing this year has been of an exceptionally high caliber, and the track has never been in better condition.

The Bahamas Winter Fishing Tournament had many entrants from among the winter colony, the chief angling enthusiast being Mrs. Anne Archbold of Washington, D. C. and Nassau. Mrs. Archbold took more leads for various species of game fish than any other of the hundreds of contestants.

Meanwhile, social activity continues unabated, as the winter colony prepares for a gay whirl of activity over the Easter holidays, when a record number of young college students are expected in Nassau.

Serenaded by a native troubador shortly after their arrival in Nassau were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collingwood, of New York. Mrs. Collingwood was here to star, in her private capacity as Miss Louise Allbritton in, "Affairs of State," Louis Verneuil's stage success shown at the British Colonial Playhouse.

The Parade of SPORTS

CHOES of the last two big events on the 1953-54 sports parade still ring through the resort, as Palm Beach prepares to close the doors on another glittering season.

The Latham R. Reed Professional-Amateur Golf tournament again monopolized the sports and social headlines. The 1954 edition of the world famous event boasted a field that was hard to equal in event of its kind.

Ben Hogan, world champion linksman, who last year captured golfdom's coveted triple crown — the Masters, the U. S. Open and the British Open — headed the sterling array of golf greats that collected at the plush and very tricky Seminole Club course for the two-day medal play tourney.

But even before the tourney could open, Hogan captured the attention of the sports world by mastering the Seminole's 18 holes in a near record-breaking 61, which gave "Mr. Golf" an 11-below-par scorecard. The ol' master used only 24 putts during the entire tour, and recorded nine birdies and an eagle, without a single over-par hole in the round.

Hogan's feat almost equalled the course record of 60 set by home pro Claude Harmon six years ago, and which is recognized as one of the country's golf records. The slammin' golf bantam lists this as one of his best rounds.

But the best Hogan could do during the tourney was finish with host of other name pros in the 143 bracket, seven strokes behind the low score. The mighty little golfer attracted large galleries both days, which watched him post scores of 70-73 for the 36-holes. An unsteady putter made a big difference in his scores, especially during the last day, which gave him a one over par card.

It was steady Lew Worsham, Oakmont, Pa., with a 68-68—136 that took the first prize slice of $1,800 out of the $10,000 tourney melon. It was the first victory for the Pennsylvania professional since he captured top money in the Tam O'Shanter Tournament in Chicago last Summer.

Worsham trailed at the end of the first day's 18 holes. His four below par 68 was good for a second place tie, with Jim Ferrier, San Francisco, who finished in the runner-up spot at the tourney's end. But with a red-hot putter cutting strokes off par, he matched his first day score for the victory.

Ted Kroll, New Hartford, N. Y. pro, turned in the best score for the first round, with a sensational 65, which is seven under par, and only one stroke above the competitive record set by Dutch Harrison a few years ago.

But Kroll's second 18 hole score soared to a way over par 78, dropping the pacesetter to a 143, along with Hogan, Sammy Snead, Harrison, at the finish of the event.

It was Kroll's stellar first round, and the able coaching he gave his partner, Richard A. Raese, Morgantown, W. Va. that gave the twosome a two stroke victory in team play.

The duo led both days, with Raese giving Kroll's score a four stroke boost on the best ball card, and the same two stroke lead after 18 holes had been completed. The Morgantown steel executive was even of greater assistance the second day out. Despite Kroll's mediocre 78, Raese playing under a 12 stroke handicap, turned in a sizzling round, that cut their card down to a 62, a 16 stroke difference in the pro's total.

Kroll picked up an extra $1,000 for his aid which coupled with his split in the third place bracket, gave him second place in tournament earnings.

The winner's margin was two strokes below Fred

Mixed doubles champions in the Everglades Club's tennis championships are shown receiving their trophies from Mrs. E. E. Bartlett, Jr. The new champions who disposed of all opposition are Robert Terry and Mrs. Joyce D. Lee. They downed a very strong duo of Mr. and Mrs. John Van Ryn in the finals to claim their right to the crown.

Hawkins, El Paso, Texas, and Capt. F. S. Holmes, Newport, R. I., who took the runner-up prize with a 125. The Hawkins-Holmes combination were trailing after the opening day by the same margin, but kept the gallery on edge until the last moment, as their 27 hole total was far below the other 72 teams entered.

The strictly pro ranks second place Jim Ferrier picked up, $1,000 with a 140, four strokes behind the winner; Earl Stewart, Jr., Dallas, Texas, with a 141, $700; Bo Wininger, Oklahoma City, Okla., tied with Dr. Cary Middlecoff, Grossinger, N. Y., with a 142, for $475 each.

In the $315 payoff bracket, Hogan, Snead, Hawkins, Kroll and Harrison were all knotted with 143s.

Trailing behind by one stroke was Jack Burke, Jr., Kiamesha Lake, N. Y.; Art Doering, Cincinnati, Ohio; Art Wall, Jr., Pocono Manor, Pa.; Wally Ulrich, Maplewood, N. J.; Julius Boros, Mid-Pines, N. C.; Johnny Palmer, Charlotte, N. C.; Pete B. Thomson, Melbourne, Australia; James Clark, Los Angeles, Calif. The entire group equalled par and received $121 for the efforts.

Claude Harmon, pro for the host Seminole Club got out of a sick bed to post a one under par 71, to share the lime-light with the first day leaders, but ran into trouble on the last 18 holes, slipping to 74, which was out of the money.

Only one stroke separated second place and a pair of teams, who tied for third, with 126s. Al Brosch, one half of last year's winning combination, and George S. Rasmussen put together 63-63, while Harrison and Kenneth Rich, came back from a 64 to add a 62 to their score in the second round.

Dave Douglas and George Kent, Jr., who were considered out of the money, when they posted a 67 in the first round, snapped back with a brilliant 61 in the final 18 holes to stand alone in the fourth bracket.

Four teams were knotted at 129, including both of Lew Worsham's partners, Robert Sweeny and Benjamin T. Batsch. Others were Art Wall, Jr., and Theodore S. Bassett; Jim Ferrier and Paul V. Shields.

At 130 for the 36-holes were Chick Harbert, and Ellsworth C. Alvord; Dave Douglas and John G. Searle; Jack Burke, Jr., and Anthony T. Wilson; Dick Mayer and S. E. Durand; Jim Ferrier and J. E. McAuliffe.

Douglas Ford and Abram Nesbitt II along with Tommy Bolt and Alfred G. Kay were tied at 131.

Bracketed at 132 were Jimmy Demaret and Daniel Topping; Peter Thomson and Joseph E. Gunster; Chick Harbert and John R. McLean; Tommy Bolt and Charles S. Payson.

Henry Ford II, with professional Pete Cooper paced the 133 group, which included Julius Boros and W. Stanton Barbour; George Fazio and Kimball Salisbury; Ted Kroll and Walter T. Shirley.

Chairman of the tournament committee, Christopher J. Dunphy who was teamed with Bobby Cruickshank, were among a section posting 134. Others in the group were Earl Stewart, Jr., with Herbert J. Adair; Cary Middlecoff, with James J. Secor; Dutch Harrison and Winston Guest; Fred Haas, Jr., and James A. Linen III; Jimmy Demaret and Edward B. McLean; Ed Furgol with George V. Meehan.

Other well-known Palm Beachers, with national ranked professionals, who placed in the 135 bracket were Merrill C. Meigs with Earl Stewart, Jr.; Thomas H. Shevlin, with Art Wall, Jr.; Arthur O. Wellman, with Johnny Palmer; Thomas A. Bradley, with Jack Burke, Jr.; Joseph Wholean with Sammy Snead; Ray A. Graham, with Sammy Snead; Larry Sheerin and Bud Holscher.

Teams recording scores of 136 or over were Dr. Cary Middlecoff with William Curran; Al Brosch with William Klopman; Bob Toski and Joseph D. Scheerer; Fred Hawkins and Joseph E. Ridder; Bob Toski and Beverley A. Bogert; Dick Mayer and Robert L. Ashe; Claude Harmon and Arthur M. Hill; Vic Ghezzi and Philip R. Turnbull; Shelley Mayfield and Arnold B. and J. E. Hollingsworth; Peter Thomson and Marshall Hem-inway; Bobby Cruickshank and Reginald Boardman; Julius Boros and Wiley R. Reynolds; Jim Turnesa and LeRay Berdeau and Hunt T. Dickinson.

Two defending champions repeated in the Everglades Club Invitational Tennis Tournament, Vic Seixas retiring the Alan Howard Trophy, with his third consecutive victory in the men's singles and Doris Hart capturing her second women's singles win.

Tony Trabert, the nation's No. 1 seeded netman, was upset in the semi-finals by lefthand-swinging Art Larsen. But the Cincinnati college boy did break into the victory circle as one half the championship doubles duo, which teamed him with Seixas.

The tourney, which displayed an internationally famous field seldom seem outside of Wimbledon, gave resort net fans a taste of tennis at its finest.

The second round of play almost gave the tournament the name of the "1954 Upset Tourney." Lowly seeded U. S. players wiped out the entire ranked foreign slate in the men's singles.

Hal Burrows, of Charlottesville, Va., started the European ouster, by defeating Sven Davidsson, National Indoor champion, 7-5, 2-6, 6-4, in a startling display of tennis wizardry. Burrows was later eliminated from the tourney by finalist Art Larsen.

Sidney Schwartz, All-Army singles champion, and former member of the crack University of Miami net squad, pulled an equally shocking upset when he blazed through Wimbledon runner-up Kurt Nielsen of Denmark in two quick sets, 6-3, 6-3. Gardnar Mulloy defeated Schwartz to enter the semi-finals as the service champ sprained an ankle, which hobbled him to the point where he was forced to default.

Tony Vincent, the country's No. 17 ranked netter, tripped English champion Tony Mottram to drop the number three seeded foreign player out of the running. But it was a young slammer from Los Angeles who stole the show. Hugh Stewart, 1953 intercollegiate titlist, unleashed a blistering power game that swept Collin Hannam also of England, right off the courts, 6-0, 6-0. Stewart's devastating serves and overhead smashes were the talk of the tourney for days after. But experience took its toll over youth, as Stewart's power was lost when he met the tourney champ, Seixas, in the quarter-finals.

This set the stage for the semi-finals which pitted Seixas against Mulloy and Trabert against Larsen. In the Seixas-Mulloy battle, the tourney's three-time champ dropped the aging Miamian in two quick sets, 6-0, 6-4. Mulloy seemed to be in a daze as he lost the first seven games to Seixas, before he found the right combination of shots. But it was too late as the No. 2 seeded player easily took the second set.

Another upset was in the making during the Trabert-Larsen duel. Larsen staged a brilliant uphill rally to drop the tourney's number one racquet man in a gruelling three-set match. As the match started out it looked as though the Cincinnati was going to breeze into the finals, but the quick moving Larsen, who hails from San Leandro, Calif., started his comeback and Trabert was forced to go all out to win the set, 7-5. In the marathon middle round, the Californian fell behind again, and trailed 5-4 at one point. He regained his peerless form to tie the game at 6-6, then foxed his way to an 8-6 victory. The final set was all Larsen, as he mixed his soft shots with heavy top spins and lightning forehead drives to take the set, 6-2.

It was hard to believe that Larsen was the same court demon, during the finals against Seixas. The champ displayed every bit of cunning that his title stands for, as he forced play all the way to whip Larsen in three rugged sets. Nearly impossible returns and beautiful shots drew applause throughout the match, but it just wasn't Larsen's day as Seixas recorded scores of 6-2, 7-5, 6-1 for this third EC crown.

George Oliver is on the ball swinging for a neck shot in action at Gulfstream Polo Club. Bob Uihlein, number four, and Bill Mayer, two, ride in toward their teammate while Tom Healy, left, comes in for the opposition. Oliver was in the pivot position for the Hurricanes of Blind Brook when they met Rubirosa's Challengers.

The women's singles ended as expected with the world's number two and three ranked players disposing of all of their opposition to reach the finals. The court battle that developed was as hot as the day, but the result was the same as time after time before, with Miss Hart's effortless smooth game besting Miss Fry, 6-4, 3-6, 11-9. It was Miss Hart's second straight EC singles victory.

The combination of Seixas and Trabert was the right combination in the men's doubles. The two top seeded netters downed an excellent pairing of Sven Davidsson, Swedish champ, and four times national doubles champion Gardnar Mulloy. The first set was the only trouble the victors had in the match, as they claimed the title with 6-4, 6-1 scores.

Miss Jane Walsh, pert Graham-Eckes student, beat the defending champion, Mrs. Robert Bennett, to capture the Sea Spray Invitational women's title. Miss Walsh was never in serious trouble, as shown by her scores of 6-0, 6-2.

Charles Harris successfully defended his men's singles crown in the Sea Spray event, by ousting the very tricky Joseph DeFina in the finals.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bennett were the only other "old timers" to annex a title as they won the mixed doubles. The other crowns were claimed by teen-age court demons. Andy Spencer and Phil Petra took the men's doubles crown, Helen Keil and Corky Tatoul were victorious in the women's doubles, to complete the annual Sea Spray title line-up.

Two of the resort's better netters retained their title, with Mrs. Frederic C. Collin and Igor Cassini winning the singles championships in the Everglades Club's annual tennis championships.

In the women's title match, Mrs. Collin faced Jane Walsh in a repeat performance of the Bath and Tennis Club's finals and although the result was the same, Mrs. Collin found Miss Walsh a much harder nut to crack this time. Miss Walsh extended the first set to 8-6 before losing.

Cassini had a clear road to his repeat victory, as he swept George Clark off the courts, 6-4, 6-3.

In the mixed doubles it was the sterling combination of Robert Terry and Mrs. Joyce D. Lee that captured the title. In men's doubles, Terry was also in the winning combination, teamed with George Clark. Mrs. Lee was a member of the winning women's doubles duo, as she and Mrs. Thompson Montgomery stroked to the victory, over Mrs. Austin Pardue and Mrs. John Van Ryn.

The Fabulous Boca Raton Club

THE BOCA RATON CLUB is experiencing one of its best seasons in its history, under the competent management of Charles T. Craddock, Managing Director, and his able assistants Larry Borsten, Edward Klughertz and William Fritz. Following the spring social season, the hotel and club will remain open till May 20th, for many national organizations who will hold meetings there. Five hundred members of the Association of Junior Leagues of America, Inc., will have a meeting at the club May 2 through May 19. Two delegates of the Junior League from each city in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and Hawaii will be in attendance.

The magnificent Boca Raton Club situated amid 3500 beautifully landscaped acres, is "the showplace of the nation's resorts," and everything under the sun, or stars, awaits the winter visitor at this tropical paradise. For the balance of the social season, the calendar will be brimful of sports and social activities, for those who prefer to visit Florida at the height of the spring season, when everything abounds with beauty.

Social activities at the Boca Raton Club are never ending and revolve around the al fresco luncheons at the beautiful Cabana Club, and in the popular Grille, which not only attracts guests, but visitors as well, with mid-day dancing neath the Sun, to the melodic tunes of Tony Cabot and his orchestra; cocktail parties in the flower and palm laden Cloister Loggia; dinners in the majestic Cathedral dining room, or dinner dancing in the star studded Patio Royale, with Gala Shows featured on Wednesday and Saturday evenings; famous outdoor Steak Roasts at the Cabana Club; afternoon teas, fashion shows, card parties, first-run movies and plays in the club's own theatre. national champion Fred Perry as pro; swimming in the hotel's two olympic sized pools, or in the sparkling waters of the broad Atlantic, with Bill O'Brien as instructor; big-game, deep-sea or inland waterway fishing. The hotel's private fishing fleet leaves from its own docks on the intra-coastal waterway, where famous yachts anchor on and off throughout the season, with Capt. Weldon Smith in charge. Also becoming increasingly popular is the new sport, water skiing, with Earl Quidort as instructor.

It has just been announced by the management that the beautiful Cabana Club will remain open for the summer months, and will feature many attractions for the daily, weekly or monthly visitor. Under the new Club Plan, sponsored by Mr. J. Washington Letter

Dear, dear Dora:

"... Aprille with its shores sote" is here and it's spring at last! You've no idea how heavenly Washington and the lovely surrounding countryside is at this time of the year. Plans include a lot of getting out into the open and we're all looking forward to garden tours, horse shows, dog shows, and garden parties, but first a glance backward before March fades from memory.

It looks as though members of Congress will have to go without their White House reception this year. Scheduled first for early February, the date was changed to mid month and then changed again to the second of March. Then the party was cancelled on March first because of the shooting on Capitol Hill. To the best White House memories, this is the first reception, to which invitations had been issued, to be cancelled since February 6, 1917. That, too, was called off the day before. It was for high Army and Navy officials and the United States had just severed relations (February 3rd) with the German Government prior to World War I. Since the President has a very full schedule after Lent, and attends only to official entertaining during Lent, it looks as though congressional wives will have to put their beautiful gowns away for another year.

A strange and interesting historical sequence was called to my attention at this time. Did you know that one man was present at the assassination of every American president? That man? Robert Todd Lincoln, who with his father and the rest of the family was present at Ford's theatre on April 14th when Booth fired the fatal shot. Later, as Garfield's Secretary of War, Robert Todd Lincoln accompanied the president on the morning of July 2, 1881, when a disappointed office seeker shot Garfield in the back. In 1901 when Lincoln, then president of the Pullman Company, was invited to the reception for President McKinley at the Pan American Exposition in Buffalo, he accepted the invitation but wrote that he felt his presence was a menace to any president. How right he was!

When Prince Bernhard, husband of Queen Juliana of the Netherlands, visited here in March as the guest of the United States Air Force he was royally feted by many people, including Ambassador and Mme. van Roijen, and the Dutch Naval Attache, Rear Admiral G. Koudijs, who gave a large cocktail party in honor of the friendly prince.

Former Ambassador and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who co-founded the American Field Service, honored the chairman of the American Field Service International Scholarships at dinner at Dumbarton Oaks, site of the birth of the United Nations and now a proud possession of Harvard University thanks to the generosity of the Blisses. About 350 American girls and boys will travel to Europe this summer under the scholarship plan and around 400 students will come to this country.

Washingtonians are working hard to aid their National Symphony Orchestra. Society en masse turned out for the late afternoon "Champagne and Fashion" show on March 8th in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom. Mrs. Eisenhower was honorary chairman.

The Canine Training Association had a dinner on March 13th at the Statler Hotel. I don't know whether this was a benefit for anything—unless, of course, it was a benefit just for households in general.

Very attractive Mme. De Moya, wife of the Dominican Ambassador, entertained several of her personal friends at a delightful luncheon at the 1925 F Street Club on March 15th. The new embassy is almost ready and the De Moyas plan to have a small dance in the new quarters at least twice a month. Washington is finding the De Moyas increasingly attractive, and over a thousand guests were present at the Dominican Independence Day Reception on February 27th at the Pan American Union. Even the radical element are taking notice of the popular De Moyas and tried to run a picket line in front of the Pan American Union the day of the reception. Washington police made the pickets move up to the next block, where they held forth in front of the American Red Cross Building.

And where do you suppose the Irish Ambassador was on March 17th? In Charleston, S. C., where, along with Governor James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State and Supreme Court Justice, and Senator Burnet Maybank, he addressed the annual banquet of the Hibernian Society of Charleston, one of the oldest Hibernian Societies of this country, having been organized in 1796. The Washington Friendly Sons of St. Patrick had to make do with Embassy Counselor, Mr. Joseph D. Brennan, at their annual party.

The younger element whooped it up over the weekend of March 19th and 20th. The Spring German, sponsored by Mary Montague Price, opened its fifth season with a ball for the benefit of the D. C. Society for Crippled Children at the Shoreham Hotel's Terrace Room. Midshipmen and Cadets, respectively from Annapolis and West Point, were honored guests. The following night the Washington Club, home of the late "Cissie" Patterson, was the scene of youthful gayety when Mrs. Shippen's Dancing Class held its Spring Holiday Dance.

New Year's Day was celebrated in Washington on March 22nd. It was, that is, if you're Iranian. Iranian Ambassador Nazrollah Entezam hosted a buffet dinner at the Embassy in celebration of the Festival of Norouz. We occidentals call March 21st the first day of spring, but in the ancient country of Iran the rebirth of nature after the long "dead" winter season marks the beginning of another year.

Everybody and his dog was present at the Armory on March 21st for the National Capital Dog Show. The Archie Randalls of Middleburg showed their long-haired dachshunds. Mrs. Holger Bidstrup, also of Middleburg and niece of Andrew Carnegie, showed her Labrador retrievers. The Dean Bedfords of New York and Standard Oil fortune showed Norwich terriers.

Egyptian Princess Emina Toussoun, now Mrs. Connie Bretsch, entered five of her Sealyhams, including her prize winning Empress of Oxclose, which has won best of breed at the biggest shows in the country. Perle Mesta's sister, Mrs. George Tyson, showed her best black and white miniature poodles.

These dog days brought Mrs. Mesta from New York to Washington, where she was present at the dinner Mrs. Tyson gave for Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Hoyt of Stanford, Connecticut. Although Mrs. Hoyt has owned many varieties from dachshund to beagles to afghans to pekingeses, since her poodle, Nunsoe Duc, won best of show in 1934 at Madison Square Garden, she's still partial to poodles. Her work in World War II recruiting dogs for service in the army received government praise and won her a Legion of Merit award.

And if this isn't doggie enough for you, you can go on to Chicago for the oldest dog show in America, the International Kennel Club show on April 3rd and 4th. Adelaide Riggs, daughter of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies will fly there to act as a judge. Mrs. Bretsch will continue the dog-circuit, taking her Sealyhams.

By now, I'm dog-tired, but the Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Wilson aren't, because they head the list of sponsors for the annual show of the Potomac Boxer Club on April 23rd, with proceeds to go to the Boys' Club of the Metropolitan Area.

That very attractive, newlywed couple, the Charlie Willis (she was the former Betty Firestone) will be guests of honor along with the Stanley Rumboughs at a dance former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies are giving on April 2nd at the Sulgrave Club. Mrs. Rumbough is Mrs. Davies' daughter and Mr. Rumbough was best man at the Willis wedding. A dinner at the club will precede the dance.

The Holton Arms School auditorium will be the scene of musical activity on April 20th when the White House Spanish Portuguese Study Group sponsors Talent Night for the benefit of the Gold Star Wives. Ecuador's Ambassador, Dr. Jose R. Chiriboga V will act as Master of Ceremonies. Congressman Kearns will be the director of song, and Mrs. Marcella Miller du Pont will be chairman of talent scouts.

It's a long way to October, but already plans are being made for the visit here of Queen Elizabeth, Queen Mother of England, "sometime in October" according to the White House. I'll write you about it in my next letter several months from now.

Have a wonderful summer, and in the meantime, I am

Sincerely,

Your Washington Correspondent,

Ruth Hatch

Orchids ~ Timeless

JOINING OF THE WORD ORCHIDACEOUS is generally credited to Walter Winchell. When used to describe the rare and breath-takingly beautiful; delicate and costly, orchidaceous is so completely apt that it immediately became part of our language.

Even though they are much more common today than twenty or thirty years ago, orchids still reign as the aristocrat of flowerdom. No woman ever grows immune to their beauty; to the thrill of wearing a new variety; to the feeling of being cherished when he sends a chatelaine of Cymbidiums or a fascinating new epaulet corsage.

The fragile appearance of an orchid is deceptive. These

as the Ages

After graduation from the community pot, the seedling spends another year in a "thumb pot," living on osmunda root and a liquid supplement. From the thumb pot it is transferred to a two and a quarter to three inch pot in which it will spend another year, then to a three and a half to four inch pot for one year more. After the final transfer to a five or six inch clay pot, the first bloom may be expected, in an elapsed time of around seven years.

An earlier bloomer, the Phalaenopsis, takes from three and a half to five years to bloom regularly, but some species flowers are amazingly durable. Though the wearer may wilt during prolonged festivities, her orchids will remain in their original pristine condition for hours. Sometimes, regarding her patrician floral ornament at four in the morning the weary lady may inquire, "How do you do it?" If her orchids could answer, they might say, "After taking seven or more years to develop a perfect bloom, we intend to live a little."

From a seed the approximate size of a grain of face powder, the orchid goes through many delicate transplanting operations on its long road to maturity. No one knows exactly how long an orchid will live, but the Alberts and Merkel Brothers nursery in Boynton has a Cypripedium Harrisianum from Asia on which a cross was made in 1880.

There is an intriguing similarity between orchid hybridizing and the life cycle of a human being. When an orchid blossom is pollinated, there is a wait of nine months for the seed pod to ripen. When the tiny seed emerges, it must be handled under the most antiseptic conditions for its transfer to a glass container about the size of a milk bottle, where it will grow in an agar solution from eight to fourteen months. Joining its fellow small fry in a community pot roughly comparable to a nursery school, as soon as it has developed tiny leaves, the orchid spends another year in this environment.

Hybrid Cattleya, used in breeding of yellow orchids, came originally from Columbia. On right is the historic Vanda Rothschildiana, one of world's costliest.

take as long as ten years before rewarding the patient gardener with one of their exquisite flowers.

Although most varieties of orchids will bloom only once a year, the Cypripediums, among other varieties, will provide flowers two or three times annually. The plants may be left in their clay pots or placed in wood baskets, tree ferns, cork bark, trees or in logs.

An exception to the formal rules of cultivation which cannot be neglected in the growing of most orchids is the informality permissible in growing Vanda—Miss Agnes Hoquim. Sun lovers, these delightful little lavender cluster orchids may be grown out of doors, in all except extreme cold. They bloom around the year, bearing up to twenty flowers on one spike, and are valuable for filling that difficult, sunny spot in garden or patio.

Raising orchids in Florida's favorable climate is comparatively easy. The warmth and humidity of our peninsula are similar to the conditions in which most orchids originally grew. So well-adapted are members of the orchid family to the Palm Beach section that they are rapidly becoming popular as a growing hobby with people who wouldn't dream of tacking them in the north.

Temperatures agreeable to a human being are perfectly acceptable to most orchid plants, even the highly cultivated types. Humidity and ventilation are very important to the plants, and they will not tolerate a dry, airless condition as well as more common house plants, none of which like such a state of affairs. Hot weather does no harm if ample moisture is present in the air; nor will a drop in temperature to as low as fifty-five degrees hurt them, or even a little lower for short periods.

Some orchids, coming originally from very high altitudes, prefer cooler weather than Florida usually offers, and definite variation between night and day temperatures, but those are not generally suited to Florida cultivation, nor are they missed in the vast array of suitable orchids from which to choose hobby plants.

Living on sunshine, moisture and air, orchids no more thrive on a starvation diet than a human being does. Although they will sunburn from too much hot sun, and develop an occasional brown spot from even a little too much light, they prefer too much light to an insufficient amount. The orchid plant has to be watched until its individual requirements are ascertained.

Morning sun is more beneficial to plants than noon or afternoon sun, and does not burn as quickly. It is a good rule to allow an orchid full sun until nine or ten o'clock in the morning, partial shade until four in the afternoon and then full sun again, if feasible.

Arranged in closely packed rows in their growing pots, young orchids live and grow in the semi-shade of a slat-house. In picture on right, Vanda Miss Agnes Joaquim exhibit their lavender flowers all year, except in coldest weather.

The outdoor orchids in Florida benefit from ever-moving air currents. Plants indoors need ventilators and windows open in all except coldest weather. A cold draft is harmful, but circulating air essential. Cold plus excessive dampness adds up to trouble in the orchid plant and moisture condensation on a plant's upper structure will lead to brown spotting of flowers and buds.

To judge the correct amount of water needed in the air for orchids the grower should gauge the degree of humidity at which he feels best. In watering the roots of the orchid plant, it is necessary to consider the growth stage of the plant. Seedlings require more water than mature plants. Syringing lightly several times a day on sunny days will supply their needs without soaking them unduly. The eye bud growth of a mature plant requires watering every five to seven days, until the leaf unfolds. The plant is then put on an eight to ten day schedule until the flower buds begin to open. No water at all is given during flowering.

With intelligent care, the orchid family offers vast opportunity for hybridization. Besides twenty thousand natural species, the list of hybrids is increasing every day as new crosses are made. Because orchids can combine parents of two different genera to produce a wholly new type, the possibilities are nearly endless. Recently the discovery of a practical method of storing pollen for several months, so that orchids blooming at different seasons may be combined to produce new strains, has given impetus to magnificent hybrids.

Hybridizers are now working for wide petals and sepals that overlap; clear, rich colors and more frequent blooming. As tricky in result as crossbreeding of entirely different strains in dogs, horses or other domestic animals, orchid hybridizing has its disappointments as well as pleasant surprises.

Probably the most expensive orchid in Florida, if not in the world, is a Stoneii, variety Platytanium, on exhibit at the Albert and Merkel Brothers nursery. Brought from Borneo fifty-odd years ago, the plant was owned by an English family. In a sale of the assets of the estate, Baron Rothschild bought one of the four pieces into which the plant had been broken for one hundred and fifty-nine pounds (pre-war). Later, in gathering for himself the other three portions of the plant, Baron Rothschild paid over twenty-three hundred pounds more, making Stoneii the second or third highest priced orchid in history. It was not the beauty of the flower, which is remarkably ugly as orchids go, but the rarity of the specimen which intrigued the Baron.

Florida is rapidly becoming an important center of orchid culture; the warm climate and ample sunlight loved by orchid plants making a natural environment. Florida orchids are now shipped to all parts of the world where currency is not blocked. Mexico and the British commonwealth countries—South Africa and Australia—are good customers. Oddly enough, many orchids hybridized in Florida are now being shipped back into the jungles from which their parent plants came. Interests in the Republic of Venezuela, for instance, on becoming aware of the tremendous possibilities of their native product, are importing Florida hybrids for the purpose of upgrading their own exports.

From one's doorstep to Biscayne Bay by gliding craft on tranquil waters, such tropical pleasures are enjoyed by many Miami residents.

Honeymooning at Lago Mar were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gorman of Washington, D. C. The bride is the former Miss Eileen McGolrick.

These Lago Mar guests from Camp Hill, Pennsylvania, are Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Preis and Harry Jr.

Fort Lauderdale's LAGO MAR

SPRING HAS COME TO LAGO MAR blossoming with guests. They stem from North, East, Midwest and South. Gone are the days when winter's last breath blew a finale to fashion in Florida.

Still cruising in southern waters at the turn of the season, and moored residentially at Lago Mar, were the William L. Sheridans of Toronto and the Harry Schaub of Summit, New Jersey.

Prize catch for Mr. Schaub from his 48-foot "Cavira" was a dolphin that tipped the reel at 42 pounds or better. Enjoying the land and sea diversions of Lago Mar with the Schaub was their young daughter Carol.

Until this year the popular Sheridans owned a home in Ft. Lauderdale. But now their winter address is Lago Mar Hotel, with the "winter" extending well into early spring. Ft. Lauderdale's socially prominent Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Cronacher, good friends of the Canadians, feted the Sheridans at a gala dinner party to mark Mr. Sheridan's birthday anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Rowan, also wintering here from Toronto, were frequent guests on the Sheridan yacht, "Scora II." Daughter Tudie spent the entire season in Florida with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan. Not until April first did the family lift anchor for the North.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. O'Connor were among the other Toronto socialites who took advantage of Lago Mar's endless season.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Pendleton of Garden City, Long Island, changed their habitat from their yacht, "Nymph," to a Lago Mar oceanfront apartment.

Also sparkling on the spring scene at Lago Mar was Atlantic and Pacific heiress Mrs. Paul F. Switz, the former Miss Olive Wrightson, who now resides in Red Bank, New Jersey. With the attractive Mrs. Switz were her two young children.

Long Islanders who preferred Florida's onrush of spring to the timid advances of crocuses included Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Carbiner and the John Mullers of Jamaica, and the A. H. Merkels of Brookville, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Kane of Garden City.

Staying at Lago Mar past the middle of April are Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Acer of Medina, New York. From Buffalo are the Harold C. Browns and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Harvey. With the Harveys is Miss Pat Werner. The O. H. Jaysanes of Rochester were also in the spring galaxy from New York State.

Chicagans included Mr. and Mrs. William A. Melody. With them was Mrs. Josephine Johnson. Also escaping the late March blows of the windy city were the George Devers and Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Ule. The Ules saw April in at Lago Mar.

From Racine, Wisconsin, Mrs. Richard J. Weichers and daughter Mona are still swimming and sunning in Lago Mar's pools and on its half-mile stretch of private beach. Mona, aged nine, gets her schooling at fashionable Pine Crest.

With Mr. and Mrs. Aris L. Green of Warrensburg, Missouri, is their son, Master Jeffrey.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray L. Parrot of Louisville, Kentucky, exchanged that city's early verdure for a long stay here.

The hostelry's romantic landscape of lake and sea was the setting for several honeymoons.

Wed February 27 in the Loyola Church, Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cote of that city chose Lago Mar for their wedding trip. They basked under the palms, sun and moon until the middle of March. The attractive bride, nee Miss Joan Maus, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Maus. The couple is now at home in Montreal.

Three sets of young honeymooners were at Lago Mar at the same time and started what might well grow into a lifelong friendship. They are the Edward Gormans of Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Jack L. Fehrenbach, Indianapolis; and the Arthur Hydes, Bloomfield, New Jersey.

Mrs. Gorman is the former Miss Eileen McGelrick, daughter of the J. Edward McGelricks of Washington. The new Mrs. Hyde is Joan Lenaz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lenaz, Bloomfield. Bridegrooms Hyde and Gorman had much in common. Both were due to report to Uncle Sam immediately after their wedding trips. Destinations unknown, except that the service wouldn't be quite as personalized as at their honeymoon homestead.

On the literary front, distinguished guests at Lago Mar were the George A. Hechts. Mr. Hecht is vice-president of Doubleday-Doran in New York.

Well known TV personalities who chose Lago Mar sunshine as their refuge from Manhattan's studio rays were Florence Renard and her spouse, Fred Van Deventer, famed for their show "Twenty Questions." The Van Deventers appeared in person in Fort Pierce, Florida, as honored guests at a fanfare called "Twenty Questions Day." On the heels of that, they took off to register as free lance guests at Lago Mar.

Stuart M. Sperry, of the New York Stock Exchange, and John J. Kehoe, also of Wall Street, wound up their winter by watching the tide table at Lago Mar's beach instead of the ticker tape. With them at Lago Mar were Mrs. Sperry and Mrs. Kehoe.

Dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sperry in Lago Mar's Starlight Room were the Walter N. Franks of Ridgewood, New Jersey, whose winter home is in Delray Beach, Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Coulter of Larchmont were among the late winter arrivals, as were Mrs. S. B. McNaught and her daughter, of Bayport, Dr. John D. Mountain of Manhasset, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reynolds, West Elmira.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bernard Wehrle, of Charleston, West Virginia, are seen on Lago Mar's oceanfront terrace with general manager Kenneth Arnold. For their winter home the Wehrles always pick a hotel at which Ken Arnold is host. Mr. Wehrle is president of the steel company, McJunkin Corporation.

From Montreal are Lago Mar honeymooners Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cote. She is the former Miss Joan Maus.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Crooke, of Roslyn, Long Island, try shuffleboard in the sunshine at Lago Mar Hotel, Fort Lauderdale. Mr. Crooke is an executive of Sperry Gyroscope Company. The couple spent several weeks at Lago Mar.

Par Avion from Paris

FOR TWO AND A HALF CENTURIES the de Broglie family has been supplying France with generals, statesmen and scholars. But it is only since the war that one of them has undertaken to supply a large part of the fashionable world with poodles. Princess Amedee de Broglie's entry into the poodle business came about in an amateur way. Twenty-one years ago she had, as pets, a pair of brown poodles, which had puppies. She couldn't bear to part with any of the puppies, and when they had puppies it was the same story. Fortunately, the de Broglie chateau, La Cote, has a large garden which is part of the Chantilly forest, a fine open place for dogs and here she built a kennel.

Bombs fell on the kennel and destroyed it. But Princess de Broglie kept her pets together, and even in good health, on the slim diet that could be spared for animals. After the liberation came the problem of rebuilding the kennel, of paying kennel maids to care for the poodles and of feeding them (no small item). They must, she decided, begin to be self-supporting. As they were of very fine blood strains she began taking them to shows, where they "collared" enough blue ribbons to put her in business, and so the Lamorlaye Kennels was born. It takes its name from the station of Lamorlaye, on the edge of the forest.

Every day now brings the princess letters from America, from Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Argentina, Greece, Egypt, Morocco—even Hong Kong—and from France's neighbors—all wanting poodles.

Lamorlaye poodle owners include American Ambassador Douglas Dillon (who had to go to the States because of illness), Mrs. Clarence McKay, Countess Estevez de Galvez and Frank A. Howard, all of New York, the Hon. Mrs. Charles Pepys of Newport, Lawrence B. Davis of Scarsdale, Mrs. Sherman Hoyt, whose poodle business in America is as well known as Princess de Broglie's in France, Mrs. William A. Greer of Texas, Ian Malcolm Moffet, Mrs. Garcia de la Huerta of Chile, Miss Pilar Jasamillo of Colombia, and such titled internationalists as the Princess de Bourbon-Artois, Princess Guy de Polignac, Countess Resseguier of Canada and Baroness Lambert of Belgium.

Princess de Broglie's show winners include the French and international champion white standard male, "Vichnou de Lamorlaye," the "Champion Sanka de Lamorlaye" who is, of course, brown, and the "Championne Snow White," a white moyen.

But poodles are not her only interest. She is president of the Committee "L'oeuvre des Amis de la Banlieue" which undertakes to bring relief to needy families of the Paris suburbs and provide summer holidays for their children.

There are over twenty families of de Broglies in Paris, all princes and princesses, headed by the Duc and Duchesse who occupy the Chateau de Broglie at Broglie in the Eure. Prince Louis-Victor de Broglie, physician, and the perpetual secretary of the Academy of Sciences, won the Nobel Prize in 1928; his brother, Maurice, also a physician, is celebrated for his work on X-ray. The daughter of Prince and Princess Joseph de Broglie married into the old royal house of Bourbon; she is H. R. H. Princess Michel de Bourbon-Parme.

The "Poodle Princess" is the former Beatrix de Faugcigny-Lucinge, a name as well-known in France as de Broglie. She has three children: Jean, Guy and Aymon-Gerard.

Those who like to indulge in romantic speculation must find a Prince Charming for each of the two great-great granddaughters of Queen Victoria who are debutantes this year—Princess Alexandra, daughter of the Duchess of Kent, and Princess Sandra Vittoria Torlonia, daughter of don Alessandro Torlonia, Prince of Civitella-Ceci and of Beatrice de Bourbon, Infante of Spain.

As the daughter of the richest aristocrat in Italy, Sandra is having a far more elaborate launching than Alexandra, whose beautiful mother necessarily observes the rules of strict economy.

In fact, Sandra has already had two debutante parties, a reception for the diplomatic corps and high dignitaries of the Vatican, celebrating her 18th birthday, and a grand ball. It was the ball which created something of a furore. Because the exiled Spanish royalties, all aunts and cousins of the debutante were invited, the rumor started that young King Baudouin of Belgium was coming and that Sandra's engagement to him would be announced that night. He left Brussels, incognito, by plane at the proper time, but whatever rendezvous he was keeping it was not in the fabulous Torlonia palace.

Even so, the ball was a spectacular affair. The Torlonia family lives in feudal style; besides having his own armed guard in uniform, don Alessandro has a staff of footmen whose lace ruffles, perukes and gold-braided, knee-length velvet coats help to retain the 17th century charm of the palace. Guests were met in the dim courtyard by footmen carrying torches.

Sandra, blond and blue-eyed, was every inch the princess,

Beauty and the Beast: It was Princess Amedee de Broglie's idea that dogs and fashions would make a good show together; every spring she proves it with the celebrated "La Belle et La Bete" show in Paris. Her black wool gown with wool fringe is by Jacques Heim.

in bouffant white, with a snug bodice to emphasize her tiny waist and truly beautiful figure. She has just completed her education in the convent of the Assumption at Hareford in England, and has an easy manner and a charming smile. Though King Baudouin's heart is elsewhere, many other royal and noble suitors will certainly find their way through the courtyard of Terlonia palace.

The 23-year old King of the Belgians had a social engagement very much to his liking when he attended the baptism of his sister Charlotte's new baby, Princess Marie-Astrid, in the chateau of Betzdorf, in Luxembourg. Two days before, the firing of cannon and ringing of bells all over Belgium and Luxembourg, announcing the birth of the princess, gave a happy tone to a day that is normally sombre in Belgium, the anniversary of the death of heroic Albert I, whose refusal to let the Germans cross Belgian soil in the first World War made him the idol of his people and of the French.

Marie-Astrid, his great-granddaughter, had for god-parents her two living grandparents, ex-king Leopold and the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg, who together held a candle tied with a white satin bow. The tiny princess, suitably robed in Belgian lace, slept through the ceremony — gazed at fondly by her father, Prince Jean of Luxembourg, her uncle Baudouin and his young step-mother, Princess Rethy.

Next to dining, Parisians love the theatre. An enthusiastic first-nighter is Madame Danet, who lives on the Left Bank and shares her husband's interest in tennis.

With the approach of Easter everybody who can get away from Paris is off to the mountains to ski, or to the Mediterranean to sun. Madame Maxime de la Falaize, who has a tall elegant figure and a professional interest in fashion, is ready for the mountains.

gunpowder was put on the anvil, and Lord Normandy set it off with a red-hot iron supplied by the village smithy.

The Earl and Countess of Dalkeith, who had to battle bad weather getting out of Scotland on their honeymoon just a year ago, had another encounter with it this February. A two hour, middle-of-the-night drive over icy roads, with the Earl at the wheel, got them to an Edinburgh nursing home just in time for the birth of an heir. The glamorous Countess was the former Jane McNeill.

The weather has little to do with the Frenchman's devotion to racing. With the approach of Spring, it just becomes more intense. Oldest and most fashionable of French racing societies is the 120-year-old "Societe d'Encouragement pour l'Amelioration des Races de Chevaux en France." To its members, Nov. 11 is the society's birthday, then Armistice Day. It operates the hippodromes at Longchamp, Chantilly and Deauville and encourages, besides racing, dressing for the races. To see the full flowering of its efforts, one should go to Longchamp for the Grand Prix, at the end of June.

The Societe de Sport de France (founded 1882) which follows the races from March through October at Champigny-sur-Marne is likewise exclusive: more than half the 23 members of the committee have titles and most of them are Chevaliers or Officers of the Legion of Honor. Most active in French racing since the war have been Baron Foy, Baron de Nexon, General Donnio, Comte Jacques de Vienne, Rene Balliere, Hubert and Jean de Chaudenay, Baron Louis la Caze, and Count Gaston Niel.

Par Avion to Palma: With Majorca only 4 hours away (3 on Sundays), Parisians have been flying down for the last of the almond blossoms, and finding the island scented as if doused with cologne. A week-end of brilliant sunshine, sapphire blue seas and trees laden with oranges and lemons (everyday joys in Florida!) are, to people from Paris and London, sheer heaven at the end of winter.

The Palm Beach Biltmore

IT'S APRIL AGAIN in Palm Beach and over at the sparkling Palm Beach Biltmore, many March visitors are extending their stay into this always beautiful month.

The Biltmore whose season was marked by the arrival of distinguished guests from all parts of the country, Canada and Europe will close its doors April 10th this year.

Looking over the roster of guests, it is noted that such personages as Mr. and Mrs. Loel Guinness of Paris, France, accompanied by their son Patrick and glamorous daughter Baroness Dolores von Furstenburg added a smart continental note to the Biltmore — this attractive family foursome occupies the sumptuous State Suite at the Biltmore. Mr. Guinness is a famous breeder of fine racing horses in Normany, France — the young Baroness, unconscious of her great beauty, caused many heads to turn wherever she appeared. Unlike many of the royal-blooded who winter on this golden isle, Dolores preferred to keep out of the limelight and led a comparatively simple life at the Biltmore — daily swimming in the pool and playing a fast game of tennis with her brother on the Biltmore's lakeside courts — the duo loved racing and two or three times a week rode to Hialeah on the Palm Beach Biltmore "race special." Dolores's half-sister is the mad-cap Betsy von Furstenburg of theatre fame.

The oil industry was well represented at the Biltmore — Mr. Philip N. Fortin of Billings, Montana, occupying one of the Biltmore's twin-towered penthouses for the season with Mrs. Fortin, is an independent oil operator of the West. The Fortins are members of both the Everglades and Bath and Tennis clubs.

Also prominent in the oil industry is Mr. W. C. Taggart of Big Rapids, Michigan, another Biltmore "regular" with his charming wife Mrs. Taggart. The duo are great dancers and almost nightly entertain at ringside parties in the West India Room.

Down at the Biltmore docks are Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Johnson who have lived aboard the picturesque sloop Don Quixote Del Mar from Deal, New Jersey. Mr. Johnson is a retired executive of the Standard Oil Company and their sloop has been the center of numerous informal cocktail parties.

The world's greatest Naval Base, Norfolk, Virginia, has been well represented this season at the lakeside resort with the Alfred and William Taylors practically commuting back and forth — also the Fred Haycoxs', Philip Barrs and other residents of this romantic Tidewater country who appreciate the ultimate in fine resort living. Alfred and William are the popular brothers of Biltmore owner Daniel E. Taylor.

All were at the Biltmore as hosts to the prominent steamship officials, members of the Havana Harbor Association who held their first meeting in the United States at the Biltmore in March. While their purpose in coming was to inspect the port facilities of Miami and Palm Beach, their visit was the incentive for a flow of smart social functions. The Port of Palm Beach was host to a glittering cocktail party in the West India Room followed by a formal dinner party with Mr. Taylor as host. Mr. Taylor of course heads the highly successful West India Fruit and Steamship Company which plys its palatial car ferries between the Port of Palm Beach and Havana. The visiting steamship officials were deeply impressed with the fine modern port facilities of Palm Beach.

Inaugurated for the first time this year were the Saturday Night Galas in the Tropical Room, highlighted with smart New York entertainment. Topping the stars was the internationally known impressionist Dean Murphy who literally brought the house down with inimitable impersonations. Memories of the happy times enjoyed at these Galas will doubtless be the subject of conversation among the coterie who follow general manager James J. Farrell from the Biltmore to the Monmouth at Spring Lake, landmark of the Jersey coast for fifty years. Mr. Farrell will open his popular summer-time operation on June 18th which as usual will be manned by the same courteous staff as that gracing the Biltmore.

Thus comes to an end another page in the always superlative resort history of the Palm Beach Biltmore — and so until another season rolls around, it is au revoir to all the lovely guests whose presence has contributed so much to "resort life as you like it"—the Biltmore way.

New York Letter ~

GREETINGS: Understand "you all" have been in a busy whirl of social activity and there is no visible sign of the season on the wane as yet. And, with the spring crowd coming in for the "little season," it must have been exciting. We are still in the throes of benefits and more benefits, the thrill of opening nights on Broadway, the Metropolitan and the Philharmonic, ballet and concerts. At this point, we are all worn out with so many social engagements, but it has been fun and now, we'll start planning for summer at Southampton and trips to Europe for their various festivals and other intriguing programs.

Although the 1954 "Belmont Ball" will not take place until June, plans are already going forward for the big event. It will take place on the eve of the running of the Belmont Stakes and the proceeds will benefit the Travelers Aid Society of New York. The committees of course, are made up of society's horsey set. The motif for the ball will be a carousel, complete with merry-go-round horses.

An important lecture-tea, held at the Waldorf for the benefit of the Maryknoll Missions and the missions of the Holy Child in Africa, was an outstanding event. The Rev. James Keller, well-known Maryknoll author and lecturer and head of the Christophers, was guest of honor.

Suppose you know that Helen Traubel, who left the Metropolitan to sing in night clubs, has been a tremendous success. She gives the customers highbrow music and makes them like it; really revolutionary. She will headline the show at the Sahara in Las Vegas, after completing her first film role. The Wagnerian soprano has signed with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to sing three Sigmund Romberg songs in "Deep in My Heart," the drama about the life of the composer, who will be played by Jose Ferrer. Her selections will be "You Will Remember Vienna," "Auf Wiedersehn" and "Leg of Mutton." She plays the role of Mitzi Fejer, Viennese entertainer who helped Romberg get his start in America.

New Yorkers and Hollywood were looking forward to one of those ultra-glamorous weddings, for Patricia Kennedy and Peter Lawford. But according to reports, the nuptials which will take place here April 24, will be attended only by intimate friends and the wedding will be small.

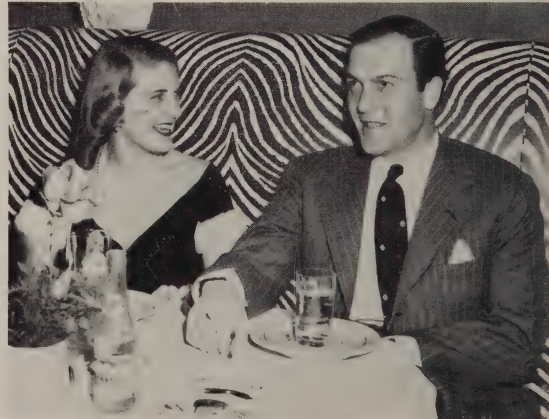

Mr. and Mrs. John Reid "Jack" Topping, snapped by the photographer at El Morocco. Before her marriage last June, Mrs. Topping was Janie Lou Dixon of Dunedin, Fla.

Stage, film, radio and television stars, performed with the regular entertainers of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus at Madison Square Garden, opening night. Audrey Hepburn, Deborah Kerr, Faye Emerson, Rita Gam, Nina Foch, Jinx Falkenburg and others, rode on elephants, horses and elaborate floats. Among the one-night clowns for the event were Robert Q. Lewis, Sam Levenson, Morey Amsterdam, Jan Murray, Herb Sheldon and Jerry Lester. Mrs. Leopold Stokowski, was chairman for the opening of the circus, which was a benefit of United Cerebral Palsy of New York City.

The concert given by Arturo Toscanini and the N.B.C. symphony recently, in Carnegie Hall, which was broadcast to the nation, was acclaimed by all listeners as one of the most impressive and memorable of his career. Do hope that you heard it. The fact that it was so laden with memories for the maestro may have had something to do with its singularly evocative power. Although Toscanini's friends say, the most living and everlasting thing in the world for him, is music, whatever its origin or personal association. It was really a wonderful experience and when it was over, he simply laid down his baton, bowed courteously, if absentmindedly, to the crashing applause and left the stage.

Chicago Letter...

MANY CHICAGOANS are skiing in Wyoming, riding the range in Arizona, and swimming at the Florida beaches, but there are enough of us around to keep the social circles spinning. The distaff side exhibits distinctive qualifications for organization of the 1954 benefits, already on the agenda.

Mrs. Mark Willing, Jr., newly elected president of Chicago Commons Association, will head the board of prominent Chicago men and women who direct the affairs of two settlement houses. Mrs. George Young and Mrs. Calvin Fentress are vice presidents, Mrs. A. Loring Rowe is treasurer, and Mrs. William Cudahy her assistant. Barbara McClurg will be secretary, while Mrs. Thomas Dean is the assistant, and Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody, Jr., will be corresponding secretary.

As president of the active board, Mrs. Willing succeeds five distinguished gentlemen, Mr. Graham Taylor, founder of the Commons, Mr. Frank McCulloch, Mr. Edward Ryerson, Mr. Thomas Underwood and Mr. Gerald Ungaro. Judging from the praise heaped upon her head by Mr. Underwood, he and the board are confident they have selected a president well qualified to carry on the best traditions.

In addition to the admiration for her indefatigable philanthropic efforts, this Virginia-born, soft-spoken woman has won renown here for special delicacies she likes to prepare. She loves to cook and makes a creative art of it.

The new Board of Directors enjoyed a recent luncheon together at the Racquet Club.

The current exhibits at The Arts Club of Chicago are by two American artists, both of whom found inspiration in Europe. Mr. John Heliker, who has exhibited at many fine galleries and Art Centers, and who won a fellowship at the American Academy in Rome in 1948, works in oil, water color, tempera, and pastel. Mr. William Congdon, sculptor as well as a painter, won the Temple Gold Medal at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in 1951. Most of the paintings in the exhibit reflect Italian inspiration.

The Woman's Board of the Art Institute will present the second Annual May Festival shortly. Mrs. James Ward Thorne's collection of miniature rooms will be exhibited. This will be the first time the American and European sets have been shown together. These exhibits, authentic to the tiniest detail, are internationally famous.

A series of tableaux directed by Mrs. John R. Winterbotham, Jr., will portray famous paintings. Mrs. Tiffany Blake is president of the board.

A share of the $75,000 required to guarantee next year's operation of the University of Chicago Settlement Houses will be raised by the Settlement board and the women's committee at the spring festival. This year's spring festival for the 60-year-old University of Chicago Settlement will feature Bidu Sayao, Brazilian opera star and soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Association, accompanied by members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, April 29, at Orchestra Hall. Mrs. William Wood Prince is chairman of the women's committee. The Settlement benefit marks the first University of Chicago event of which Mrs. Prince will be in charge. Last year, both she and her husband were sponsors of the Gershwin festival for the Settlement.

Mrs. Homer P. Hargrave, President of the Woman's Board of Passavant Memorial Hospital, has announced that Mrs. Robert R. McCormick will head the Cotillion and Christmas Ball as Chairman for 1954, with Mrs. Bruce Thorne and Mrs. Paul Rowan as Executive Chairmen. The program will again be in the capable hands of Mrs. Charles A. Ziebarth. Mrs. Philip A. Van Vlack, Jr., will again be Chairman of the Special Gifts Committee. Mrs. J. Stewart Harvey will head the Decorations Committee. Mrs. George R. Beach, Jr. and Mrs. Edward B. Smith will be co-chairmen of the Rehearsal Committee, and Mrs. Loyal Davis has been chosen Publicity Chairman.

Off on Safari is the phrase of the day but for those who returned early or will leave late in the season, Chicago is not a dull place. It is snowing today . . . big, hexagonal, glistening snowflakes . . . which drop a soft hush over things for a while. March, she came in like a lion-hearted lamb.

Umbrellas, chairs and colorful beach rolls are available there for those whose pleasure is lolling on the dazzling white sand. The Cabana Beach Club pool is frequently the scene of thrilling moonlight aquacades during which are presented the world's finest divers and swimmers in a setting of gay lights and swaying palms. ANOTHER BRILLIANT PALM BEACH SEASON is drawing to a close, and this winter, as in other years past, the popular Patio restaurant has maintained its enviable position as a leader among the resort's favored gathering places.

Scene of a great number of amazing successes in the 1953-54 season, the Patio management and staff are looking forward with enthusiasm to the next opening date in December, for when next season rolls around it will mark the Silver Anniversary of that world-famed restaurant — its 25th year as a favorite rendezvous for Palm Beach residents and visitors.

Since the Patio itself is so often chosen for special family events such as anniversaries or reunions, the colorful restaurant is certain to be selected next season for many more of these special events, for what could be more pleasant than entertaining guests for dinner and dancing in a beautiful place that, itself, is celebrating an important anniversary.

Patio management already is planning ahead to make its Silver Anniversary season more brilliant than any in the past, and the word again next winter will be: "I'll see you at the Patio."

Internationally noted for the excellence of its fine French cuisine and the personalized service extended to every guest, the Patio attracts the top names in the worlds of society, business, sports and entertainment, and its guest book resembles a "Who's Who."

The Patio gained its popularity through the food it serves, its top rate entertainment, and excellent dance music by Val Ernie and his orchestra.

This season has seen a long series of featured events at the Patio, and almost every night an outstanding specialty was presented. Beginning at 5 with cocktails and informal parties in the lounge, Patio evenings opened with dinner in the dining room from 6:30 on, and then followed long, enjoyable evenings of dining, dancing and entertainment.

Outstanding events at the Patio this season included the selection of "the best dressed woman in the Palm Beaches"—an honor won by Mrs. William H. Miles of New York; fashion shows, benefit affairs, and the appearances of "the King of Clubs," Joe E. Lewis, Miss Patricia Windsor, musical comedy songstress, Georgie Jessel, Dean Murphy, Lillian Roth and numerous others prominent on the stage, screen, radio and TV.

With the season nearing an end, the Patio management is thanking its many guests for their patronage, and is promising things "bigger and better" next winter.

Many enjoyable dinner parties are held at the Palm Beach Patios restaurant. Shown above, l. to r., are Mrs. Edward J. Kelly, Mr. Harry Brady, Mrs. Alice M. Lappin, Mrs. Gertrude Brady, Mr. E. J. Kelly, Mrs. R. M. Lynch and Mr. Joseph Lappin.

THE PROCESSION OF GLORIOUS DAYS making up April in Palm Beach find cottage colonists and late season vacationers filling their days with tennis, golf, fishing, sunning, shopping and preparations for departure. Their evenings are often spent in Miramar restaurant, where the tensions of a busy morning and afternoon find complete relaxation in historic Florentine Room and cool, lovely tropical garden.

Under the expert ministrations of the superbly trained staff, soothed by the delightful music of the Famous Gypsies and completely satisfied by a wonderful dinner or late supper, Miramar patrons find the restful prelude to the sleep that refreshes for another happy day in the sun.

In all resorts the desire of vacationers is the same—fun and rest. Palm Beach supplies all the ingredients for a wonderful winter season and Long Island is tremendously popular in the summer. Nando di Filippo, proprietor of the Palm Beach Miramar restaurant so beloved by winter resorters has moved his base of operations to Long Island for the summer season, so those who have enjoyed his establishment here can have the same facilities near Southampton.

Nando's Miramar in Quogue, Long Island will open around the first of July for approximately two months, offering guest rooms for the season or week-end, kitchens where the same wonderful food will be prepared as in the Palm Beach Miramar, a restaurant and two bars. One of the bars will be night-club style, with continuous entertainment for all summer resorters who want the most for their funtime.

Among discriminating resorters who have discovered Miramar restaurant and all it has to offer for gracious dining have been Mr. and Mrs. Benson Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Munn, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Gurnee Munn, Jr., Mrs. Ruth Richardson Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard L. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Duru, Commander and Mrs. A. Winfield Chapin, Mrs. Charles Sawyer, Mr. and Mrs. William Minner, Mr. and Mrs. Winston Parker Ayers and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Creadon.

SERVICE IS SUPER at Maxim's plush dining spot in Surf-side, Miami Beach, and glory be, no waiter grabs your plate right out from under your nose to make way for the next customer—and tip. You don't feel guilty at Maxim's if you linger longer than necessary over a second cup of coffee, or purposely prolong the enjoyment of the excellently prepared meal with some calory-packed, lip-smacking gourmet's delight such as Cherries Jubilee or Crepes Suzettes.

Maxim's is nice to come back to, time after time, for you never tire of its sumptuous food, its elegant atmosphere, its air of spaciousness which invites leisurely dining without thought of nerve-wracking and indigestion-provoking hurry.

Not only do you find food at its best at Maxim's, whose French cuisine has a reputation all its own and whose gastronomical treats are blended to a king's taste, but you encounter the best dressed people in town, too, and quite naturally, for VIPs from all over the world meet at Maxim's.

Reason, of course, is that they've found they can find no better food anywhere, so it makes no difference if they travel the world over, they'll come right back to Maxim's.

DISCRIMINATING DINERS have found at Liggett's South Ocean Restaurant the qualities which they demand in a fine restaurant — excellent food served graciously in beautiful surroundings.

In his first season in Palm Beach, William J. Liggett, owner and operator of this popular restaurant, has impressed residents and visitors alike with his ability to ascertain the culinary pleasures of this area and to cater to these to such an extent that South Ocean is now considered an "old favorite."

Liggett's offers nightly a varied and appetizing list of entrees, and in addition features a Chef's Special, so there's hardly a chance of not being able to select your favorite entree.

Mr. Liggett remodeled, refurnished and generally renovated the former South Ocean Club to the extent that the restaurant now boasts one of the most luxurious settings possible for a restaurant. At the same time, he emphasized his location — in Palm Beach right on the ocean — so that the cocktail lounge and bar—beautifully decorated in the tropical motif — contains the relaxing and informal setting so appropriate to this resort.

A recent occasion was the group of resort visitors who gathered to help Mrs. Jesse F. Wright, Lake Worth, celebrate her birthday. Attending also were Mr. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Schendorf, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harding, Mrs. Amy Carkhuff, Mrs. Ethel Tremley, Mrs. Caroline Mauderill, Miss Louise Carson, Miss Elizabeth Durand and Miss Julia Osborne.

An unusually large Kigelia pinnata or West African sausage tree, moved from their Palm Beach estate, graces the front yard landscaping of Mr. and Mrs. George Wendell Phillips' ranch on North Military Trail. The tree is thought by African natives to contain good luck properties. Near the front door, in center of picture is a rare miniature Brazilian traveler's tree, blooming most of the time with an exotic white bloom.

The scene above will not be recognized by the younger set, or by those who came here during the past 20 years, but it will bring fond memories to those who knew Palm Beach in its earlier days. This is the ballroom of the famed old Poinciana Hotel, razed in the mid-30's, decorated and ready for the annual George Washington Birthday Ball—the event that officially closed the Palm Beach "season" in those days.

HE BOUGHT HER THE YEAR HE MADE HIS WILL

She's still a good boat, too. He's kept her up—made repairs as they were called for.

But how about his Will? Has he kept that up?... Or is it obsolete, right only for yesterday's needs, because he hasn't made the repairs called for by changes in his family—his business—the securities markets—the tax laws?

Every Will should be checked regularly, to see if it needs repairs. May we help you check the financial side of yours? For its legal aspects, you should, of course, consult your lawyer.

Wine-Man's Ancient Elixir

ON OCTOBER 15, 1953, the outstanding sommeliers of America got together at the Waldorf Astoria in New York and with great ceremony, formed "The American Society of Sommeliers," with Maurice Colen as president. Other officers of the society from New York City, include: Rene Chappeland, of the "21 Club," vice-president; George Stich, The Colony, secretary-Treasurer; Victor Puppini, the Bruxelles; Jean Groen, Waldorf Astoria; Alex Bohy, Hotel Pierre; Victor Le Perron, the Chambord; Roger Guil, "21 Club."

Byron Tosi, vice-president of W. A. Taylor and Company, and Charles Beinbeck of the Hearst Publishing Company, were among the men who helped Mr. Colen in the formation of the society.

Born in Holland and educated at the Hotel College in Frederich Rhoda, Germany, Maurice is internationally-known for his culinary prowess and comprehensive knowledge of wines. Another distinction of which he is particularly proud, he is the godfather of H.R.H. Princess Margueriet, third daughter of Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

Maurice has lectured throughout the country on the service of wines, cooking with wine and the various types of vintages and their history. He is also the author of various newspaper columns on the subject and has appeared on radio and television, as an outstanding authority on all phases of wine history and service.

"Of all the wines that exist," says Maurice, "none is

And he continued, "I wonder if any performer on any kind of instrument, has ever struck as gladsome a sound as that made by a cork when leaving a champagne bottle?"

Speaking of other outstanding wines as recorded in the "history of wine," Maurice noted: Wine making in Germany is as old as in any other country in Europe and it all began in the Moselle Valley. The vines were planted and cultivated along the Rhine Valley. Incidentally, the district of the Moselle vineyards is the most northern viticultural region in the world and the culture of grapes in that latitude requires great skill and attention.

The vineyards are planted on the northern or sunny slopes of the steep mountains. Above the vineyards, the hills are wooded and the mountain tops are frequently capped by an old castle or ruins of an ancient fortress. Wherever the Moselle widens a bit, a picturesque little village fills in the gap.

The upper Moselle extends from the French Luxembourg frontier, through the most romantic and beautiful hillside country of Western Germany, to the city of Trier and includes the vineyards along the Saar and Ruhr Rivers. The narrow climbing terraces, one above the other on the steep hillside, are propped with masonry, retaining walls and flying buttresses. Up these slopes, often with a sixty degree incline, all soil and fertilizer must be dragged by hand and at great labor from the valley below. No animal can be used for plowing between the narrow planted rows, on what sometimes seems like a vertical incline. In soil such as this, volcanic in origin and broken up into a combination of shale and slate, Riesling does grow, even thrives under the heat-retaining quality of the soil; keeps the roots warm in the cold nights of the late autumn.

The middle Moselle extends from Trier to Enkirch; the lower Moselle from Enkirch to Koblenz. Once more it is seen that the finest wines from the Moselle region come from soil which is not fit for the cultivation of other agricultural products. On both sides of the tortuous Moselle River, lay the vineyards of this famous region of the same name. The Moselle Valley is divided in 135 districts, of which some of the best known are: Piesport, Zeltingen, Brauneberg, Trittenheim, Uerzig, Traben.

Among the softest and best balanced of the Moselle wines, are those from Trittenheim. The most celebrated is the Bernkastler Doktor. All have a light greenish color. The wines from the Ruhr region have a pleasant flinty quality. The greatest of the Saar wines come from the vineyards around Wiltingen and Oberenmel and are distinguished by a very flowery and slightly spicy bouquet.

THE GROWING TREND TO LINCOLN

Furniture, courtesy Knoll Associates, Inc.

What started the big move to the new Lincoln?

WHY have sales of this fine car more than doubled in two short years?

The answer lies partly in the new and imaginative ideas inspired by modern design, modern architecture, modern living.

Notice the clean-lined new front grille, the expansive new rear deck, the brilliant new styling all around, the exciting new colors and interiors. Then try this new Lincoln.

Its action and its handling tell you why Lincoln won the Mexican Pan-American Road Race two years in a row—sweeping the first four places in the stock car class.

The matchless Lincoln V-8 engine gives you new response with its new automatic 4-barrel carburetor. Handling is effortless; for Lincoln is the only fine car with ball-joint front wheel suspension.

Isn't a car as ahead-of-the-times as the new Lincoln worth an in-person look and a drive? You're invited to visit your Lincoln dealer.
